Underlay material – Properties

Footfall sound reduction

Footfall sound is the sound heard in the same room (possibly disturbing) when a floor is used. This can be caused by walking as well as by putting down / dropping / moving of objects. Underlay materials can effectively reduce these sounds.

Impact sound reduction

Impact sound is created when the floor is walked or jumped upon, but also when a chair is moved accross it and describes the noise levels in the rooms below. Underlay material can significantly insulate impact sound which is foremost directed downwards.

Compression strength

The higher the compression strength of the underlay, the better the punctual load tolerance.

Moisture protection

Humidity rising from the subfloor, which is found in every inhabited building due to the influences of climate and living conditions can damage floor coverings. Underlay materials with moisture barriers effectively prevent humidity from penetrating wood floors.

Heat resistance

The higher the thermal resistance of an underlay material, the better its insulating property between the sub-surface and the installed wood floor. For application on underfloor heating it is important that this value is as low as possible.

Anti-slip effect

A special surface coating hinders the movement of the plank on the unterlay material and enhances the long-term durability of the connection between the planks.

Typical characteristics of wood

Grades

Grades describe the expressive power of a wood floor. The careful selection and combination of knot content, grain and colour interplay add an entirely personal touch to each type of wood from which the planks are made. And because every species of wood has its own mind, the grades are also always characterised both individually and typically for each wood type, as shown by oak in these examples.

1. „even“

A particularly harmonious surface; the absence of knots (with the exception of pin knots) produces uniform colouring.

2. „balanced“

The balanced grain, fine knots and occasional traces of sapwood create a surface that is entirely reminiscent of nature.

3. „expressive“

Defined knots and visible sapwood create a vibrant and richly contrasting surface appearance.

4. „impulsive“

Large knots, intense interplay of colours, filled cracks and visible sapwood give this particularly lively floor a healthy dose of individualism.

Note re. grading:

Variations in the grading of the wood surface cannot be excluded due to the natural raw material. To permit these natural and unavoidable variations in the grading classes, up to 3% of the staves may be taken from another grading class. (Extract from EN (European Norm) 13489:2002)

Colour play

Natural oil treated surfaces in particular can create diversity in the play of colours due to the deep penetration in the wood structure. This can vary greatly from plank to plank and is a natural, intended characteristic of these surfaces. When installing, care should be taken to take boards from different boxes to ensure a balanced distribution.

Colour changes

As wood is a purely natural product it can show a subtle colour change when exposed to sunlight. The extent of this change in the surface over time is dependent also on the individual characteristics of the different wood species.
